DETAILED ACTION

Claims 1,7, 9 and 12-14 are pending.

Response to the arguments :-

Applicants argue that the initial burden is on the examiner to show that the substitutions would in fact change the properties.

Applicants argue that the US "656 publication taught the similar various substitutions for example Fig 49, where R1, R" and R"" are substitutions (e.g., alkyl or aryl) similar to R1-R10 in claim 1.

This is not convincing as in the same reference it clearly states that the variables should give different color emissions and may have different carrier transport rate.

[0171] These molecules, related to Ir(ppy)<sub>3</sub>, can be formed from commercially available ligands. The R groups can be alkyl or aryl and are preferably in the 3, 4, 7 and/or 8 positions on the ligand (for steric reasons). The compounds should give different color emission and may have different carrier transport rates. Thus, the modifications to the basic Ir(ppy)<sub>3</sub> structure in the three molecules can alter emissive properties in desirable ways.

Applicant's invention is drawn to a red luminescent compound.

See paragraph 0002 on page 1 and paragraph 0013 page 3 of the specification.

[0002] The present invention relates to a red luminescent compound and an organic electroluminescent device using the same, and more particularly, to a red luminescent compound and an organic electroluminescent device using the same that offers improved luminescent efficiency and driving voltage characteristics.

Art Unit: 1625

And [0013] It is therefore an object of the present invention to provide a red luminescent compound with improved luminescent efficiency, an organic electroluminescent device and an image display using the red luminescent compound.

Thus from the prior art it is evident that the substitutions show different luminescent properties.

The rejection still stands.

Conclusion

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
